“My Olympic experience did not go as planned, but I made the most of it. By fighting internationally, I got to see a lot of different styles of fighters and took some of the good qualities and added it to my style, which will help me become even a better fighter. I am a very smart boxer with fast hands and power. When people see me, they will think of Aaron Pryor, Mike Tyson and Andre Ward all rolled up into one.”

Moore, who was honorably discharged from the army after serving our country for 3 years, will be making his professional debut as a middleweight tonight in Indianapolis, IN on a card promoted by 4 Champs Promotions.

Moore credits his relationship and trust with Split-T Management's CEO David McWater with his decision to sign with the company.

"I signed with Split-T Management because of David McWater. I am very excited to have someone like him to guide my professional career. We first met in 2013 when I won the National Golden Gloves and learned he has been following my career for a while and our relationship built from there." said Moore

"He has always believed in me and came through with everything he has promised."

Said David McWater, "By the 2013 National Golden Gloves and I thought he was the best fighter in the tournament. He was so exciting of a fighter, and he was clearly the best amateur in the country at that time. At one point, he was undefeated for a 30 month period. He is a great fighter and a great guy and I'm thrilled to be part of his professional career."

Moore, who was stationed at Fort Carson, Colorado will continue to live there and train with world class trainer, Dickie Wood in Colorado Springs, Colorado.

"Living and training here is so beneficial for my career" says Moore. I'm living and training thousands of feet above sea level. I'm a gym rat as it is, but training here where the air so thin, makes me have such an advantage over my opponents because I will never get tired. I'm learning new things from Mr. Wood every day and I can't wait to put my boxing on display for the world to see."

Wood, who has worked with many world champions in the past, including: Stevie Johnston, Oleg Maskaev, Diego "Chico" Corrales, and Buddy McGirt, feels he has a budding superstar in his hands.

" I have worked with several world champions in the past and his talents are comparable to them at this early a stage of his career."

Moore agrees, "I see myself becoming a world champion and being a superstar in this sport. I live, eat, sleep boxing and will be the most exciting fighter to watch in today's game. I'm a throwback fighter, and will remind everyone of Sugar Ray Leonard and Pernell "Sweet Pea" Whitaker because I do things in the ring that fighters just don't do anymore since the 80's."

Split-T Management names Joe

Quiambao Director of Boxing Operations

New York, NY (October 26, 2015)—Upstart boxing manager's Split-T Management has made it's first significant hire by adding longtime distinguished matchmaker Joe Quiambao as it's Director of Boxing Operations.

Quiambao, who started as a Golden Gloves amateur boxer, has most recently been the matchmaker for one of the biggest boxing promotions in the world in DiBella Entertainment.

In his 13 years at DiBella Entertainment, Quiambao matched fights and helped develop the careers Sergio Martinez, Paulie Malignaggi, Jermain Taylor, Andre Berto as well as Edwin Rodriguez, Ivan Redkach and Seanie Monaghan.

"I am excited to have someone with Joe's experience and talent on board," Said Split-T Management CEO Dave McWater. "For an agency like ours that is intent on getting prospects lots of fights fast, it is very important to have a top matchmaker. In Joe, I think we got the very best. We haven't had a fight not get made since he started."

"Joe has not just have experience, but also the intelligence, and most importantly the work ethic that is what Split-T management is all about."

Quiambao was out of boxing for a year and even got a job in the working world, but he missed the sport and being around the boxing people for whom he had developed and received a mutual respect throughout the world.

"The sport is in my blood. When I thought about getting back in, I said to myself that it had to be the right situation and then a friend of mine told me about Dave McWater," said Quiambao. "When I met Dave, he explained to me his vision and what is going to separate him from everyone else. I did my research on him and learned that he was a great businessman.”

“He owns several bars in Lower Manhattan and has been involved in other sports such as baseball and basketball. On top of that, he is a great guy.”

“He had the requirements that I was looking for in that right situation.”

“With me being a former New York Golden Gloves champion, I grew up in the boxing community my whole life and wanted to be on the side of the boxer. I always felt that I would be better working directly with the fighter. I feel with Dave’s smarts and my experience in boxing, we are going to do a lot of things that have not been done in the sport for the fighters. I am happy to be a part of that”
